

Jordan Allott
Executive Director
Mission Washington

Jordan Allott is a documentary filmmaker, founder of In Altum Productions and senior advisor to In Defense of Christians. Mr. Allott has filmed projects in over 25 countries, from China and Syria to Nigeria and Cuba, with themes ranging from international human rights and American Politics, to Catholic spirituality.

In 2009-10, Mr. Allott went into Cuba to film a documentary about Dr. Oscar Biscet, a Castro dissident and human rights advocate who was imprisoned by the Communist regime. The acclaimed documentary screened at over 50 venues across Europe, the United States and South America, including a 25-stop university tour. Members of Congress, U.S. ambassadors and mayors of U.S. and European cities have hosted additional screenings. Now out of prison, Dr. Biscet and

Mr. Allott continue working together to help facilitate a free and democratic Cuba.

More recently, Mr. Allott's international human rights work has focused on the Middle East and Northern Africa, with a multitude of trips to Nigeria, Egypt, Lebanon, Syria and Iraq. In 2014, despite significant ISIS activity in the region, Jordan crossed into Northeast Syria from Turkey under the cover of night to document the heroic struggle of Christians to survive. Mr. Allott returned to Syria and Northern Iraq to film his latest project, Our Last Stand. Our Last Stand follows Helma, an Assyrian-American school-teacher, to her ancestral homeland of Iraq and Syria as she helps reveal the plight of Christians and other minorities living there. The film is currently in distribution and has already screened at the E.U. Parliament in Brussels, the Heritage Foundation and a multitude of cities and film festivals around the world.

Mr. Allott's and his work have been seen regularly on Fox News, EWTN News, CNN International, Telemundo and Univision and he has co-produced projects with the George W. Bush Institute, the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops and the U.S State Department, among others. Mr. Allott has also written opinion pieces for National Review, National Review On-Line and the Weekly Standard and is a 2012 National Review Institute Washington D.C. Fellow. Mr. Allott was born in Reading, England, received a B.A. in Political Science, Philosophy and Film from the University of Wisconsin-Madison and resides in McLean, Virginia.
