

MARIA CAVERO SALAZAR

Maria is an Immigration Counselor in Canadian Human Rights International Organization (CHRIO), whose mission is helping clients to go through their immigration processes as well as providing assistance in order to meet with the local social services and facilitate their settlement in Canada.

At earlier years, she worked for the government at the National Institute of Statistics in Lima-Peru, where she mainly processed information regarding to education, agriculture and health, which was collected from specific areas in the Capital.

One of her memorable experiences at working on the private sector was at IMPECO Industrial Automation, a Japanese representative company in Lima, where she started working as a Storehouse Assistant. After some months she became a Storehouse Chief and some months later she became the General Manager Assistant.

Once in Canada, she took the Immigration Consultant program at Herzing College. As an immigrant, she felt motivated for her own experience at doing her paperwork on immigration matters. It was hard to her to get every process done and she wanted to learn how to help others on related issues.

Now, her career is her passion; the client is her main concern, and her work is her sacred duty. She humbly says that she fell in love with her career.
